INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT TELEPHONE OPERATORS

The Telephone Operator is selected from among many applicants, because every one who applies is not fitted for this work.

She is chosen because she has a good speaking voice, is free from nervousness, is quick witted and blessed with poise. These attributes are necessary in order to insure service to the Telephone User.

After a young lady is accepted by the employment department she is given instruction and is taught the art of handling the switchboard.

Her health and general comfort are in the hands of competent and careful experts. She has good accommodations, a well ventilated, well lighted place to work and conditions surrounding her equal to many of the better class of homes.

Our operators are faithful and industrious. Noted men and women have visited our exchanges and have departed impressed with the remarkably bright, loyal and industrious personalities they have found at the switchboards and in our executive departments.

The BEST EFFORTS OF THESE YOUNG LADIES are offered you in the telephone service; a kind word to them over the wires when you are calling will always bring a gentle "Thank You," as she instantly does her best to connect you with the number you are calling.

These are times of unrest and apprehension. The turmoil following the close of the war has found its reflection in unrest on the part of the people and an unusual irritability. Telephone patrons can assist us in swinging the telephone service back to normal by making it a point to encourage our young women with kind words.
